NOT JUST A MOM

A little support

We gathered small steps that really fit into an ordinary day with a baby.
Tick off what worked.

01 / PART

Everyday life hacks

- [ ] Find 10 minutes just for yourself: a page of a book, tea by the window, a favourite song from start to finish.
- [ ] Spend at least one of the baby's naps a week on something of your own instead of cleaning.
- [ ] Write down five to seven small joys that take 15 minutes, so you don't have to think of them when you get a free moment.
- [ ] Pick one chore you can do less often or more simply: skip the ironing, order groceries, cook for two days at once.
- [ ] Keep ideas and thoughts in your phone notes: a hobby can live in small pieces.
- [ ] At the end of the week, write down one thing you did for yourself.

02 / PART

How to share the care with loved ones

Caring for the baby is a shared job, not "helping mom".

- [ ] Write down all the housework and baby care together, so you can see how much there really is.
- [ ] Hand over whole tasks instead of "helping": for example, bath time and the evening walk are fully on your partner.
- [ ] Agree on your own hours: each adult has time when they are free while the other is with the baby.
- [ ] Ask for help specifically, with a day and a time: "on Saturday from 11 to 1, please stay with the baby".
- [ ] Take turns with night wake-ups or weekend mornings, so everyone gets some sleep.
- [ ] Once a week, briefly talk about what works and what is worth changing.

03 / PART

Communities

Places where you can ask for advice, share your experience or simply talk to people who understand.

- [ ] Babyblog — themed communities and discussions about parenting and everyday questions.
- [ ] Glavmama — a club for expecting and new mothers.
- [ ] Mamlife — a social network where mothers share stories and ask questions.
- [ ] SelfMama — about motherhood, self-fulfilment and a woman's life beyond a single role.
- [ ] Mamy v fokuse vnimaniya (Moms in Focus) — a project with support groups for women facing emotional burnout.

If it has been hard for a long time

If you've been short of energy for a long time, joy has gone or anxiety won't let go, it's worth talking to a specialist: a psychologist or a doctor. That is also taking care of yourself, not a weakness.

Notes

What worked, what you'd like to try and what not to forget.